Myanmar's Rohingya Muslim minority have long suffered severe restrictions of their basic rights, including severe persecution in the Buddhist majority country, which is largely Buddhist. Around one million Rohingya Muslims have fled Myanmar, across the border into Bangladesh in recent years. They are one of the world's most persecuted minority groups. The government in Myanmar has repeatedly rejected criticism of the deportation, including by the UN. The government has denied the Rohingya are a distinct ethnic group, instead claiming they are illegal migrants from Bangladesh, who have been living in Myanmar for decades. The Rohingya population in Myanmar is around 1.1 million. The majority of them fled their homes to escape persecution in 2012. The government has issued a "clearance order" to force them back to Myanmar. Those who do not return face imprisonment. Myanmar's government has faced criticism for the expulsion. Amnesty International described it as "a refugee re-education, forced return and forcible transfer programme". The move has been condemned by the UN and has seen the deportation of more than 13,000 people. In 2012, Amnesty International described the Rohingya as "one of the world's most persecuted minorities". Bangladesh, where the majority of the Rohingya population have fled to, has also been criticised for its handling of the refugees. One in 11 Rohingya refugees fleeing Myanmar have been killed or injured, including 59 killed in one attack in a remote northern Rakhine state village in October, according to aid workers who spoke to the New York Times. Myanmar has made slow progress in fighting the Islamic State-linked group known as the Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army (Arsa). While attacks by Arsa have reduced, they have not disappeared. Earlier this week Arsa claimed it killed nine police officers in an attack on a checkpoint in an isolated area of northern Rakhine state. No group has claimed responsibility for the attack. The violence in Myanmar has displaced hundreds of thousands and is among the world's worst humanitarian crises, according to Human Rights Watch. A recent Amnesty report described the displacement as an "unprecedented scale of killing, torture, rape and other serious violations of international law". The Department of State has backed the Myanmar government's recent action to deport the Rohingya back to Myanmar, following a meeting with Aung San Suu Kyi at the White House. This article was

What's New in the Photoshop 2021 (version 22)?

The invention relates to an apparatus and a method for compensating the relative movement between two objects, for example between the vehicle in which the apparatus is embedded and the road, by means of a contactless coupling. When vehicles travel on roads, especially on motorways or other heavily trafficked roads, unpleasant road conditions may arise. This is particularly the case when vehicles travel near or on a road with a high percentage of traffic, for example a motorway, or when travelling at night or through foggy weather conditions. Road conditions which are caused by high-traffic road sections or motorways may also lead to unnecessary wear and tear and/or consequent repair costs on such vehicles as a result of insufficient maintenance on those road sections and due to improper driving. Towards this end, DE 10 2008 003 071 A1 proposes a device and a method for detecting the stress on a tire which is situated on a wheel of a motor vehicle. The device includes at least one sensor, a transmitter, at least one receiver, and a control unit. In order to detect the stress on the tire, the at least one receiver receives a signal that is emitted via the transmitter and transmitted by the sensor, and the control unit determines the stress on the tire from the signal emitted. DE 10 2007 035 220 A1 discloses a vehicle behavior pattern assessment apparatus. The apparatus includes a reference data memory, a reference data storage, a determination memory, and a determination storage. The reference data memory stores reference data about the vehicle. The reference data storage stores reference data that are obtained from the reference data memory. The determination memory has a database of determination data. The determination storage stores determination data that are obtained from the determination memory. The determination data represent vehicle conditions. The determination data are compared with the reference data. When the reference data are stored in the reference data memory and the determination data match the reference data, it is concluded that the vehicle is having the same conditions or is running under the same conditions, i.e., the vehicle is driving under the same conditions or has the same driving behavior, irrespective of the current speed. The reference data may represent various vehicle conditions and may be based, for example, on vehicle parameters, such as velocity, acceleration, lateral acceleration, and also on the current environment, and on the current conditions of the vehicle. The determination data may be determined from the information about the current environment and the current conditions of the vehicle and, for example, include information about the current traffic situation.
